THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1864.

SHALL WE GIVE UP THE CONTEST It cannot be denied, and should not, if I could, be concealed, that the people in the North bave, within the last few weeks, been considerably depressed in spirit with regard to the situation of the national armies in Virginia and Georgia. They have not moved forward as rapidly and successfully as was wished, while some reverses have been met with which were not, perhaps, expected.

But the masses of our population have been so little accustomed to war that they naturally form an undue appreciation of its difficulties, delays, and misadventures; and are, therefore, too easily elated by a success or discouraged by a fallure.

It is, however, nearly time that experience had taught them more wisdom in this respect. They should have learned ere this that war, copecially on a grand scale, is no such business as may be regulated in its movements and results with mathematical certainty, and that while a decisive victory may be long postponed, it is not necessarily to be despaired of. This is especially true where the opposing belligerents are so nearly matched as to protract bostilities for a long period of time, with alternate gains and losses on both sides; and where this is the character of the struggle, we should never forget that the question of ultimate triumph for either party is really a question of endurance.

Bearing, then, this fact in mind, and viewing the war, at this stage of it, in the light of that fact, there certainly is much to inspire the friends of the national cause with undiminished hope and faith. There is a vast difference between the strength of the North and the South as respects all the essential resources for the prosecution of the war. No one can full to see that this section has vastly the advantage.

It has ten, if not twenty, times the military power of the seceded States in men, money, and every other respect. Hence, if the contest must be reduced at last to the simple problem of which party to it can bear it longest, the plainest calculation, based on the census tables, will show that the national armies must eventually prevail, provided the people, who have thus long sustained it, will not utterly give it up, through a blind and weak impatience to hurry the strife to an impossible or dishonorable conclusion.

It would surely be no less marvellous than disgraceful, if the people, who remain at home in peace and comfort, should evince less fortitude and persistence in the strife for the preservation of the Government than the soldespondency or of a disposition to abandon the and pertinacious now in defending, against discoverers. domestic traitors, the inestimable heritage of unless we are most unworthy custodians of the great trust they confided to our charge.

We must not give up the war because we are growing tired of it. If Rome was not built in a day, neither was any great empire ever saved in a day, against lutestine or foreign foes. It takes time to accomplish all grand undertakings, and the grandest of all is the salvation of the proudest and mightlest experiment of popular government of which history has any record. We must persist, then, to the end. There is virtue in endurance. God we are but true to the cause, it must and will finally triumph.

THE HEROISM OF HONESTY.

It seems easy to utter the first words the heart sends to the lips, or walk in the straight path, according to one's convictions of right. At the first glance this appears within the abilities of a child. But this is honesty, and the great master of human nature never wrote more truly than when he said, that "to be honest as this world goes is to be one man picked out of ten thousand." How few of the bundreds with whom we are acquainted can ciain this distinction! Think over your intercourse with your most intimate friends, or review your knowledge of all classes of society, sed you will be compelled to admit that thorough honesty is the rarest of virtues. The fact is, that to be entirely honest, far from being easy, is the most difficult task of life; and the man who exhibits, throughout his career and under all circumstances, a pure devotion to right, in word and deed, merits the laurel of a hero.

Let us suppose that a young man commences life with a determination to be honest at all hazards and at any sacrifice. He will speak and act in perfect harmony with his convictions of right, and leave the consequences to God. Such resolutions are natural to inexperienced youth. Upon the first entrance into the social circle comes a trial which proves fatal to nine out of ten. The youth is compelled to choose between what is sincere and what is agreeable, but false. Without intruding his opinions or sentiments at an unreasonhe time, dares he answer, directly and truthfully, a question addressed to him, when he knows his sincerity will offend the questioner or the company? He must, if he be honest; and if he is firmer than the majority who are subjected to this test, the probabilities are that he will be voted a "boor," and outlawed from the society he desires to cultivate.

Here is a sacrifice which few have the courage to undergo. The young man yearns for the comforts and luxuries of wealth, and devotes himself to the drudgery of trade, or a tollsome profession. While engaged in his wearing and ill-paid labor, an unscrupulous friend, fertile in schemes of speculation, which, though pernicious in principle, promise speedy fortune, invites his aid, and offers him a tempting share in the magnificent proceeds. Ease and luxury are in his reach. Nobody will be particularly injured by the project, it is whispered, although it cannot be precisely reconciled with sound morality. Can the poor laborer shut his eyes to the dazzling vision, and not only say "No," to the tempter, but characterize the speculation as it deserves?

Look around you, and say how many men of your acquaintance could prefer honest poverty to riches thus proffered, and denounce the wrongful scheme at the expense of a friend. Suppose the young man enters upon the field of politics. He is ambitious of distinction, and is confident of his qualifications for office. He has certain convictions of what is right in public policy. But his views are not popular, nor have they the sanction of men of influence in the bestowal of office. He is offered high position if he will either renounce his principles or express his adhesion to a policy which he is satisfied is weak or wicked.

Can our young politician reject the alluring tender, stiffe his aspirations, remain true to his convictions, and live on in obscurity? Cast your eye over this broad Republic, or scrutinize your immediate locality, and show us the man who has done this, and we will show you one whose merit is so singular that he deserves a statue. Our public offices are the slaughter-houses of honest purpose. The men who would "rather be right than President" may be numbered upon the flugers of a hand. In a winter of pervading distress, mark the terrible test of a laborer's honesty. He is strong, industrious, and able to work, yet he can find no employment that will give him an opportunity of earning a cent. His wife and children are freezing and starving in his dreary home, and he has become desperate. At the next grocery and the coal-yard he knows that, with a little caution, he can help himself to provisions and fuel, without much risk of detection. Shall be procure this relief, or sit down and let those he loves so dearly perish before his eyes? Dire necessity might excuse the crime. Never can the tempter come with more irresistible recommendation. Yet the truly honest man would see his wife and little ones sink in death, and stretch his own limbs for the grave, rather than steal a herring or a piece of coal.

In the same season, also, we have seen the rigorous trial of the merchant's honesty. While hundreds, whose business was prostrated by a financial storm, have continued to maintain palatial homes, and a position in "the best society," at the expense of their creditors, we have observed one man, struck by the same blow, giving up everything, even his household furniture, to raise the means to pay his debts-descending from princely luxury to absolute poverty, only happy to be assured of the approval of a pure conscience. Such sacrifices make heroes of men, crowning them with rarer and more unfading laurels than those which deck the brow of the victor upon a battle-field. In view of the constant conflicts with the most potent temptations into which the man who determines to keep his faith with conscience must enter, and the rarity of a complete triumph, let us write again the golden line,

"An honest man's the noblest work of God."

GOLD MINING IN COLORADO. During the last five years, the almost fabuous profits realized from gold and silver mining operations in Colorado Territory have attracted the attention of capitalists and pracdlers. The army manifests no symptoms of tical business men. Within the space mentioned, the constant stream of gold that has conflict only because it is prolonged. Even flowed from the ports of the Pacific has almost our Revolutionary war lasted seven years, entirely changed in its character. Instead of though its most famous battles were but the chance and uncertain results obtained by skirmishes in comparison with the terrible washing and surface digging, which characcagagements that have taken place within the | terized earlier operations, the mining labors last three years and a half between the Na- of the present day are conducted upon a practional and Rebel forces; and yet our father | tieal and scientific basis, aided by the highest persevered through all discouragement and efforts of mechanical contrivance. The development of the quartz mines of political liberty and independence which they | Colorado requires the combination of skill and achieved and bequeathed to us? Surely not, capital. Where these are employed under honest management, the returns are almost bewildering in their magnitude. The dazzling dividends of oil stocks and railroad shares are thrown completely in the shade. There are instances in San Francisco of persons in the humblest walks of life who have become millilonaires on the original investment of comparatively small sums.

Indeed, San Francisco is the great centre of the joint stock mining companies, and the sudden rise of prices there is sent by telegraph daily to New York, Boston, and Philadelphia. will help those who help themselves, and if In this city a large amount of stock is held in such corporations as the Ophir, the Gould and Currie, and the North Clear Creek Gold and Silver Mining Company. The latter company bids fair to become one of the most successful and prosperous in the Colorado region. Major-General Joun A. Dix is its President, and he gives to its concerns a thorough personal supervision. Besides owning immense mines of unparalleled richness, it has a working capital of nearly half a million, and is managed by men of the greatest ability and experience and of spotless personal integrity. The following letter will convey some idea of the enormous mineral wealth of that splendid region, which is destined to perform its share in releasing our posterity from the financial burdens of our present struggle to preserve and maintain our Union :-

"CINCINNATI, July 27.—Joseph Francis, E.q., New York:—Dear Sir—I received your note lust as I was leaving your city for the West, and, in reply to your inquiry, I beg to say the proper of the North Clear Creek Gold and Mining Co-pany, of which the Hon. John A. Dix is Pre-dent, ranks among the best mining property Colorado Territory, especially the claims of the Gregory No. 2, the Simmons, and the Ground Hog ledes—all of which are extensively worked, and their value demonstrated.

"The 'Henderson Mills,' now owned by the

"The 'Henderson Mills,' now owned by the company, was in good running order last spring, and will pay a large profit on the working expenses, with ordinary management.

"You ask my opinion in regard to the erection of mills, gold-saving apparatus, etc. With our present experience, I am in favor of the Kelth Desniphurizer and the Bartola pans used in conjunction, for gold saving, though an expensive mill. With your large working capital, you could creat mills capable of running 40 tons per day. I think it a very safe calculation to say that your claims will yield $300 per cord, equal to $25 per ton, and often double this.

"Now a mill should work at least twenty days in a month, and ten months out of the twelve, which is only two hundred working days out of the three hundred and twelve. Thus forty tone per day, at $25, yields $1000. Two hundred per day, at $25, yields $1000. Two handred working days in a year, $1000 per day, $200,000. Allow one-half for working expenses, and you then have $100,000 in gold at coin rates. With gold at 250, this shows ten per cent. profit on $2,500,000.

"Mills of the capacity alluded to should be erected complete in Colorado, even at present high rates, for less than half the working capital your company has.

"I am clearly of the opinion that, with your lodes opened down to pay, any good manager can work up to and a long ways above my estimate. mate. "Your obedient servant, "Gro. L. Nickorns."

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

UNION ATENEM.-The Gothle arch running the whole width of Logan Square, forming what was known as Union avenue, and one of the principal architectural attractions of the late Sanitary Fair, has come to a decided change of purpose, About one-half of it now stands on the north side of Market street, stretching from the West Philadelphia Savings Fund building to the line of the West Chester Railroad. The material was purchased by the Pennsylvania Rallroad Company for passenger station purposes. In the northern wall two portals have been made. The tracks of the road will be laid to the inner entrance. The entrance for passengers will be at the eastern end of the avenue. The Savings Fund building has been evacuated by its former occupants, and now makes a very commodious tichet office. Com-munication between the ticket office and the station is given by a passage way leading directly through the Saving Fund property into the avenue building. In a month or so the present passenger depot at Eleventh and Market streets with senger depot at referenth and started streets with be vacated by the company, and this use of Union avenue is only intended to be temporary, until the company put up a new structure for the purpose. This will be a capacious and substantial structure. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company do nothing by halves. The new mammoth depot will be used by three roads—the Reading, the Baltimore, and the Pennsylvania. This is the case in Chicago and other places. It will ultimately be the case everywhere. The trains for the three points, as above named, will then start from the same station.

MEETING OF MACHINISTS AND BLACKcrus.—A large meeting of representatives from e different foundries of this city was held last creng, at the Wetherill House, NATHAN B. THAYER was chosen Chairman, and

Wm. C. Brooks acted as Secretary.

A circular was presented to the meeting for their consideration, which was on motion adopted as

The circular sets forth that in their past history no parallel state of affairs had been known, and that what is fair remaneration at the present time, a week hence may be far below what justice demands.
Though at present receiving nominally higher remuneration for their labor than ever before, yet from to neeration for their labor than ever before, yet from the terrible advance in price of every article of consumption, the comforts once enjoyed by their families are gradually being removed beyond their reach, and while limited to the common necessaries of life, provision for a time of sickness, want of employment, or old age, are entirely out of the range of possibility. the circular concludes by urging prompt action in

On motion, a resolution was adopted requesting a employers to answer the same on or before Austi 26th. The thairman was also requested to obtain as many of the signatures of the employers as It was also agreed that the delegates from each hop be authorized to collect funds for the support of he movement. The meeting then adjourned.

DEMAND FOR DWELLING HOUSES, -The emand for dwelling houses has probably never be fore been equaled in the history of Philadelphia. Notwithstanding that building improvements are going up on all sides still this denset does not decrease, but, on the contrary, becomes more pressing each day. The houses most in demand are those that rent from ten to eighteen dollars per month. Few, if any, of these can be secured at the present time. Tenants are offering a premium to agents of from ten to twenty dollars to secure thom a dwelling. The few vacant houses that are to be found are gene-rally up for saic, and not to rent.

This great demand for dwellings shows the contantly increasing population of our city, and it is a figuration to-day, whether Philadelphia, notithstanding the thousands she has sent to the war, withstanding the thousands she has sont to the war, is not as thic kly populated as three years since. Another cause for this demand is in consequence of the fact that all branches of industry are reaping compelled to occupy one and two rooms, as on former occasions, are now able to take to themselves a small and comfortable home. Capitalists could not seek a safer and better investment for their money than in the creetion of this class of buildings, which are now and will be for years so much sought after. Changery with Anson.—Yesterday after.

CHARGED WITH ARSON.-Yesterday after noon, FREDERICK SCHRAYSHUHN was before Alderman WELDING for a further hearing, upon an alleged charge of having set fire to a stack of hav on the wharf below Vine street, on the night of the third of August, with the intent of detrauding the Scourity Insurance Company of New York.

The evidence before the magistrate showed that he was the owner of the hay, which had been condemned by the Government inspector, and which he had insured in the Security Insurance Compay for eighteen hundred dollars. On the night of the fire he was seen, ten minutes before the slarm was given, about the premises. He had stated to the Fire Marshal that he was out of town when the fire occurred, the statement having been false, as he was seen ten minutes belore the fiames were discovered. The ovi-dence was such as warranted his binding over for a further hearing, when other witnesses will be ex-amined.

PREPARATIONS TO RECEIVE THE TWENTY -THIRD PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS .- A meeting of logates from several fire companies was held, last vening, at the house of the Delaware Engine Company, to make preparations to receive the returning veterans or the Twenty-third Pennsylvania Regiment, whose term of service has expired, and who are expected home on the 24th instant. The following named companies were represented:—Delaware Engine, Shiffler Hose, Independence Engine, As-Engine, Shiffler Hose, Independence Engine, Assistance Engine, Western Hose, Perseverance Hose and Washineton Hose. The only business of importance that was transacted was the passage of a resolution inviting the Chief Engineer, Assistant Engineers and Board of Directors of the Fire Department, the Press Club of Philadelphia and F. A.
Wollaurt, Chairman of the Committee on Reception, to take part in the ceremonies. The meeting then adjourned to meet on, the 25th at the house of the Perseverance Hose.
